SUMMARY OF EXPERIENCE

Dr. Takahashi is currently an Associate Professor in the Department of Dermatology at USC's Keck School of Medicine where she serves as Residency Program Director and Director of Pediatric Dermatology at LAC+USC Medical Center. She is passionate about the education of medical students and residents, patient care and service.

She was previously a faculty member in the Division of Dermatology at UCLA where she has held a variety of teaching and administrative positions including Associate Residency Program Director, Director of the Psoriasis and Phototherapy Center and Co-Director of Pediatric Dermatology.

Dr. Takahashi has been published in medical journals and books, and she has presented papers at several conferences and meetings.

At HMF, she provides dermatologic care of skin, hair and nails to patients of all ages. In addition, she conducts clinical trials in Dermatology at HMF.

Since 2000 she has volunteered her services as co-director of Camp Wonder, an annual summer camp for children with severe skin disease.

ON A PERSONAL NOTE

Dr. Takahashi grew up in Pasadena where she graduated from Polytechnic School. She is delighted to practice in her hometown community.
